To Whom It May Concern,

Colby College receives applications for admission from students attending secondary schools across the United States and around the world. Our admissions process is holistic, and every applicant is reviewed within the context of their unique personal and academic background. Each year we admit students from a wide variety of educational settings – residing in rural and urban areas, attending private and public schools, and experiencing traditional and nontraditional curricula.

Colby accepts a wide range of student transcripts that meet our stated admissions requirements so long as they provide a full and accurate representation of what an applicant has learned and accomplished. Applicants from schools with proficiency-based transcripts will not be disadvantaged in our admissions process in any way.

Through the Colby Commitment and in partnership with the New England Secondary School Consortium, we are pleased to support efforts to increase collegiate enrollments and completion rates for students from all backgrounds.
